There can be a lot of meanings and readings that modern Islamic values are, as well as self-details and comparative variations. Thanks to this, I try to write an article through the information given to me. Modern Islamic values represent the modern time-appropriate procedures and applications of Islam. To understand them, it is necessary to understand that the main direct spirituality in the history of Islam has shifted to a more modern time. This includes developing various methods to accomplish religious goals, as well as how to reagirov globalization, communication, and social change.

The main features of modern Islam:

1. Individualism and democracy: Modern Islam has seriously established the idea of the role of democracy and the promotion of self-expression among the outside population and community members. Self-expression, referring to the fact that humans are not controlled by others, focusing on freedom and right in society is the first value of modern Islam.
2. Ijtihad and creativity: modern Islam educates the continuation of Ijtihad (ijtihad) and the adoption of new Ijtihad. It aims to update Islamic law and regulations, to adapt it to modern life and environment.

3. Social justice and dishonesty: modern Islam shows the demand for social justice and Insaf to be put into practice. It is an important value that social economic laws are carried out adequately, protecting the rights of citizens and not oppressing anyone.
4. International cooperation: the importance of international cooperation and toleration in modern Islam is emphasized. The universal principles of Islam, the order between regions, stability and the continuous conformity of the side to other countries maintain its importance.
5. Tolerance and nurture: modern Islam, along with rules of order and discipline, realizes the importance of nurturing and educating people. Restrictions on the cones of beliefs and deeds are reduced, and people are educating freedom in self-expression.

Influence of modern Islam on social relations:

The impact of modern Islamic values on social relations is enormous. These values, through the education of important principles of right and freedom, require human self-expression in society and a strict degree of respect for Human Rights. This allows for the building of a healthy society based on loyalty, Justice, Legal Education and social stability.

The social impact of modern Islamic values balances the laws and political reforms being implemented in society due to their inclusion of the principles of democracy, insaf, rights and freedom. These values are important in expressing the unchanging principles that individuals seek to place on mutual respect and spirituality.

Among modern Islamic values, there are conflicts between some groups favoring the maintenance of traditionalist religious rules and practices, while other groups calling for a reinterpretation of religion and its persecution on a modernist scale. These conflicts arise in many areas such as offbeat thinking, social injustice and gender inequality, democracy and human rights issues. Modern Islamic values also include changes and reforms of Islamic education systems. In schools and universities, such important topics as the renewal of Islamic Science, the use of new technologies, the application of modern pedagogical methods are considered. These changes can also affect the teacher-young student relationship.

When it comes to social influence, modern Islamic values are intended at every point in the world. There is a connection between important issues such as their cooperation with other religious and cultural organizations, their respect for Human Rights, the great problems of the joint world and how they affect society. There is also a connection between important issues such as how modern Islamic values cooperate with other religious and cultural organizations, respect for Human Rights, the big problems of the joint world, and how they affect society.

The modern world is undergoing tremendous changes, and these changes are also completely editing the field of religious values and practices. Modern Islam is defined by a further revision of classical Islamic values and historical practices, the support of new logical and social calculations, and the desire to adapt them to modern particles.

Modern Islam, while emphasizing the resolution of modern social, economic, political and cultural problems, also makes religious practices look new. In it, the control of the religious situation is associated with social organizations and rules, trying to satisfy a number of legal and social issues. Modern Islam advocates cooperation with social organizations and supports working alongside political-strategic advice from the state. This allows for the integration of religious and political views and social direct use.

New manifestations of religious culture are transmitted through modern Islamic values. This was done with the help of figures, sectarian detail, detail, and hand-made creations to control variability, to ensure that love and respect for detail and hand-held creations are right. This state of affairs further encompasses the realm of religious discourses and detail, as well as increasing the familiarity of Muslim societies and the dialogue stemming from coarse foreign species. The modern persecution of the fullness of religion and Culture, on the other hand, is central to the organization of social orientations. Modern Islam, which makes religious practices meaningful, allows for the resolution of social issues, protection of human rights and sustainable direct use around the world.

In addition, it is very important to consider the future changes of modern Islam, adapt to the processes of globalization and modernization, observe the influence of religious programs on social practices, analyze the attitude towards historical and economic changes. The analysis of modern Islamic values and their impact on social relations helps to give insight. A detailed analysis of modern Islamic values and their impact on practices, mastered with more research and study-studies in this area, is self-demanding.

The analysis of modern Islamic values is significant as the primary means of explaining changes in the Islamic world today and understanding receipts. This article discusses the main characteristics of modern Islamic values, their impact on social and political organizations, as well as the role and changes they have played in today's society.

The core characteristics of modern Islamic values are the set of principles that they see, implement in Traditionalist Islam, including social justice, human rights, gender equality, and spirituality. These principles correspond to the requirements of modern society, changing the interpretations of ancient Islam and accepting today's world and its negotiations. The influence of modern Islamic values on social and political organizations is enormous. Their orientation towards the promotion of Justice, stability, immutability, social relaxation and Human Rights in society is leading to political innovations and reforms. These values, democracy, immutability and the foundation for the protection of human rights, through which the physical and spiritual development of Muslim societies and their progress are becoming important tools.

The modifications that modern Islamic values bring into society occur mainly in a double way. First, they require that the spirituality of Muslim societies be restored and renewed in the order derived from ancient studies, or that spirituality be maintained. Second, they seek to strengthen inter-spiritual relationships by increasing mutual exchange of ideas between societies that have undergone Islam transformation. When analyzing modern Islamic values, it is important what role they should play in building a reliable and sustainable society. This analysis will help to strengthen the focus of Muslim societies on democratic and human-centered values, to show its circles aimed at increasing its economic and political progress, as well as to determine their place as part of a global society. In the analysis of modern Islamic values, it is important to increase the exchange of ideas between the participating society and each other. These values can help change order based on mutual thinking and discussion. Muslim societies can access their use as platforms that seek to change and assimilate interactions and global discussions.

The analysis of modern Islamic values is seen as an important means of gaining a place to understand and change today's world. Their influence on social and political organizations, the protection of human rights, the maintenance and development of spirituality, establish important dialogues on whether society can be developed or modified in a democratic and sustainable way. These values can help modern Islamic societies gain a foothold in the global world and provide opportunities to create unique approaches to them.

In general, the acceptance of a large part of modern Islamic values in Muslim societies, and not in some places, is a substantive topic that includes many important negotiations that continue throughout the world. Details and analyses of the subject include historical, social, cultural and religious indicators.
